Congratulations!

Congratulations to the 2009/2010 doctoral graduates of the Psychology Department’s Industrial/Organizational Psychology Program who have accepted academic positions in psychology departments. Since 2006 the program has placed 12 graduates into academic positions around the country and world (Lebanon and Turkey). This is 43% of the total graduates during this time, which is a very high rate of academic placements for this type of rigorous program.

See below the names of the 2009/2010 graduates and their academic affiliations.

Dan Ispas, Illinois State University. His research interests are performance appraisals and management, individual differences in the workplace, bridging the scientist-practitioner gap and cross-cultural test adaptation and development.

Joe Mazzola, (USF Sunshine ERC Occupational Health Psychology Trainee), University of Tulsa. His research interests are in stress and health in the workplace, and how organizations can encourage healthy lifestyles of employees.

Matt Prewett, (USF Presidential Scholar), Central Michigan University. His research concerns group performance from a variety of perspectives.

Kristen Shockley, (USF Sunshine ERC Occupational Health Psychology Trainee), Baruch College-City University of New York. Her main research interests center around the intersection of work and family life, with a focus on its impact on employee health and well-being.

Congratulations to the graduates and the faculty for this wonderful achievement!
